
NEWS & NOTES

New Report Recommends Regional PPP Units : A new American Enterprise Institute report by Carter Casady and Rick Geddes recommends the creation of seven regional PPP units in the United States (based on economic megaregions) to help facilitate the continued growth of private investment in U.S. public infrastructure. Similar to PPP centers of excellence used in various parts of the world, the proposed regional PPP units would be quasi-governmental entities that help government partners advance PPPs through offering specialized services including pre-project screening, project prioritization, education, and advisory services. The authors suggest that such units would generate a range of benefits, including "lowering the costs of completing PPPs, and the wrapping and marketing of similar projects across state lines." The full report is available here.

Cali Launches PPP for Public Safety LTE Network: California issued an RFI earlier this month seeking proposals to design, build, and operate a statewide public safety long-term evolution (LTE) radio-access network. The purpose is to see if a viable PPP arrangement can be provided as an alternative to "opt-out" of the nationwide First Responder Network Authority's (FirstNet's) arrangement, in which the authority would use its own contractor to construct such a network for the same purpose. If the state feels such an alternative better suits its operations, the contacting parties would be required to maintain a network in California that would allow for seamless integration with FirstNet, which is under the authority of the federal National Telecommunications and Information Administration.

MBTA Officials Award Cash-Counting Contract: In October, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's fiscal control board awarded Virginia-based Brink's a five-year, $18.7 million contract to take over cash-counting operations. The move is expected to save $8.6 million in its first year alone, according to the Boston Globe. The agency was recently cited as being costly and inefficient; a recent consultant report found that half as many private sector workers could complete a significantly greater amount of work at a higher level of quality than in-house operation, the Globe recently reported.

Federal Bureau of Prisons Renews Prison Contracts: As reported in the August edition of this newsletter, the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) announced that month that it would start phasing out its use of private prisons within the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP), yet BOP has since renewed two private prison contracts. At the end of September, private prison operator The GEO Group, Inc. announced an extension of its contract with the BOP for its D. Ray James Correctional Facility, effective until September 30, 2018. The move comes alongside a legal challenge by GEO to the recent decision to phase out the use of contract prisons in the BOP, saying the DOJ acted "illogically," according to the Houston Chronicle. Separately, in November the BOP announced the renewal of its contract with CoreCivic (formerly Corrections Corporation of America) to operate the McRae Correctional Facility in Georgia. The BOP will make monthly payments to CoreCivic for 1,633 beds, down from the 1,780 provided by the previous contract, according to The Tennessean.

PPP Sought for US/Canada Border Crossing: Earlier this month, the Windsor-Detroit Bridge Authority issued an RFP asking three consortia—Bridging North America, Legacy Link Partners, and CanAm Gateway Partners—to bid for the task of designing, building, and maintaining the proposed Gordie Howe International Bridge, which would connect Detroit, Michigan in the U.S. to Windsor, Ontario in Canada. The estimated $2.1 billion bridge project would replace the existing Ambassador Bridge, which is currently utilized by 2.5 million large cargo trucks a year, around 30% of all such crossings between the two countries, according to Global Construction Review. "The Gordie Howe International Bridge is one of the most significant infrastructure projects in North America because of its vital role in maintaining and growing Canada's most important trade relationship and closest partnership," Amarjeet Sohi, Canada's minister of infrastructure and communities, said of the plan.

North Carolina Advancing Toward Medicaid Managed Care: Community Care of North Carolina (CCNC), the nonprofit that manages health care for 1.6 million Medicaid patients in the state, released a report last month showing continued savings in costs (from $597 per patient per month in 2010 to $543 in 2015), as well as in hospital emergency room visits, admissions and readmissions. In the $110 million contract, the nonprofit serves as an umbrella group that oversees 14 different community-based networks, with a presence in all 100 North Carolina counties, ultimately serving 84% of the state's 1.9 million Medicaid patients, according to the Charlotte News-Observer.

As the current Medicaid arrangement continues to tout savings, the state awaits response from the federal government over its more comprehensive privatization proposal, which would change statewide Medicaid delivery from the "fee-for-service" model under which it currently operates to a flat rate per-patient, managed-care model with up to three private providers, as well as up to 10 separate contracts with regional networks of providers, dubbed "provider-led entities." Although the privatization model would end the current contract with CNCC, the nonprofit plans to participate in the bidding process, according to the News-Observer.

Kansas Seeks Private Operator for State Psychiatric Hospital: Earlier this month, the Kansas Department of Administration issued an RFP seeking a private contractor to operate the state's Osawatomie State Hospital, one of two state facilities that provide mental health services for Kansans. The proposal would allow for a contractor to transfer up to about half of Osawatomie's 206 beds to other areas in Eastern Kansas. The RFP calls for a five-year contract, which could be extended for three years. Due to Senate Bill 449, which Gov. Sam Brownback signed in May, any proposal to operate the hospital would ultimately require legislative approval before a contract could be executed, according to KCUR 89.3 News.

Wayne County, Michigan Jail Health Care Contract Approved: On October 20, Wayne County commissioners voted 10-5 to approve a three-year, $52 million contract with Correct Care Solutions to provide health care services for 2,000 of the county's inmates, according to The Detroit News. County Executive Warren Evans sees the move as an opportunity to improve services for inmates, not cut costs. Concerns over the quality of healthcare for inmates in Wayne County jails date back to the 1970s, when the jails were first placed under a court-ordered consent decree to fix persistent health problems, which include poor ventilation, lack of care for chronic conditions, and inadequate bathroom facilities, according to the Detroit Free Press.

Illinois Announces Emissions Testing Contract: In late October, the Illinois Department of Environmental Protection announced changes to the state's vehicle emissions testing program, including a new contract that officials expect to save the state $11 million per year, and $100 million over the contract term, according to IEPA Director Alec Messina. Most of those savings would be achieved by streamlining testing to a single process, eliminating a second process that applied to very few vehicles, and did little to affect air quality, according to IEPA officials. The IEPA also expects quicker testing from the new contract, saving Illinois residents time.

PERC Releases California Wildfires Study: The Property and Environment Research Center (PERC) recently released a policy study focusing on providing economic perspective to policies governing wildfire management. From a theoretical standpoint, fire suppression efforts should be applied so long as an additional dollar spent on fire protection avoids more than a dollar's worth of additional fire damage. In reality, many issues confound such an analysis, such as the formation of the fires themselves and incentives issues involving landowners and agencies. These issues plague many prospects and proposals for better management, but do note that some more-promising proposals exist: a combination of budgeting at a flat baseline and allowing agencies to bank remaining funds for future use could improve incentive issues, as could placing tighter controls over developed areas located adjacent to wilderness areas. The full report is here.

Audit of DC School Lunches Contract Released: An audit conducted by District of Columbia Auditor Kathy Patterson found that the 2008 decision to outsource food services at D.C. public schools neither saved money nor improved meals. Patterson recommends food services go back to in-house management by the school system. Carla Watson, Interim Chief Operating Officer of D.C. schools (DCPS), says that taking over food services is not something that they have planned currently, and she disagrees with the auditor's recommendation to transition back to in-house operations, citing a fruitful relationship with contractors being monitored by DCPS staff. The response also noted while DCPS "carefully considered implementing a self-operated food service operation," there are "many immediate risks that inform our decision" to not go back to an in-house arrangement, such as absorbing legacy workers and renegotiating contracts, WTOP reported. The response also noted that the new food service contracts were only approved this July, were not in effect during the timespan covered by the report, had only been in effect for a few weeks when the late-September DCPS response was written, and that they will likely achieve cost savings using operational methods the previous arrangements did not.

USF Student Housing PPP Approved by Florida Board of Governors : On November 1st, the Florida Board of Governors approved the University of South Florida's (USF's) plans to enter into a PPP agreement to build a new mixed-use student housing development. Capstone-Harrison Street, LLC—a partnership of Capstone Development Partners, LLC and Harrison Real Estate Capital—will finance, build and operate the new development. The project, which is expected to be completed in June 2018 and will result in a net gain of over 1,100 beds after the demolition of existing student housing that dates back to the 1950s, will also include dining and retail, as well as health and fitness facilities, according to the Tampa Bay Business Journal.

East Baton Rouge Parish Nearing Prison Health Care Contract: The parish looks to speed up plans to privatize prison health care for inmates in its prisons after lawsuits and the resignation of one of its staff physicians. While a vote for a one-year, $5.3 million contract for CorrectCare to provide those services was scheduled for November 9th, staff concerns have pushed the vote back to the 22nd, The Advocate reported. Overcrowding and a lack of mental health services for inmates have been big concerns since the state closed a nearby mental health facility—the Earl K. Long Hospital—in 2013, according to the Greater Baton Rouge Business Report.

Jackson, MS Looks to PPP to Improve Parking Operations: WDAM 7 News reports that the Jackson City Council continues to debate whether or not to outsource the operation of the city's parking meters to Hudson Associates. Many of the city's roughly 1,000 meters do not work properly, hurting revenue for the city, and, as part of the deal, Hudson would replace broken meters with ones that allow for credit card payment. The deal would also include an up-front payment to the city by Hudson for the opportunity to collect fares as revenue. Critics of the move say that increased enforcement of parking violations would improve revenues without the need to privatize. Separately, the city plans to increase hourly parking rates—from $.50 to $1.00 or more, according to WDAM.

Tazewell, Virginia Looks to Outsource Landfill Operations: The Board of Supervisors in Tazewell County is exploring the potential outsourcing of landfill operations to a private company, while retaining ownership of the landfill itself. The county received an unsolicited bid for such a proposal from Santek in February, leading to an RFP that generated two responses, with Santek delivering the favored proposal, according to the Bluefield Daily Telegraph. After making a further assessment of cost considerations compared to the current in-house arrangement in the county, the Board of Supervisors will make a decision on whether to approve the Santek's proposal.

Killeen, Texas Seeking Solid Waste Outsourcing: On November 1st, Killeen's city council agreed to draft an RFP to outsource the city's solid waste pickup. An outside consultant will draft the RFP, which will allow companies to bid on a contract or enter in a franchise agreement with the city. Since the city's mowing program is currently funded as a part of its solid waste management program, mowing would need to be moved under the city's general fund or be outsourced separately, according to the Killeen Daily Herald.

QUOTABLE QUOTES

"If ever a public enterprise were ripe for privatization, its [Montgomery County, Maryland's liquor monopoly]; the ineptitude of the county's Department of Liquor Control, an 80-year-old remnant of post-Prohibition days, is notorious."

—"Montgomery County's unbreakable liquor monopoly" (editorial), Washington Post, November 20, 2016.

"Using actuarial sleight of hand to deny hard realities is a recipe for disaster. In the end, it's no better than trying to recoup gambling losses by doubling down on the next bet."

—Ed Bartholomew, "Public Pensions: Don't Look Now, But....," Milken Institute Review, November 1, 2016.

"Any claim that a specific policy will foster growth or decline should be treated with a great deal of caution. [...] Confident predictions that economic growth is attainable if city leaders would just get with the program are seriously oversold."

UVA law professor Richard Schragger, quoted in Alan Ehrenhalt, "The Reality of Mayors' Economic Promises," Governing, November 2016 edition.

"There is some justice, I suppose, in the [Pennsylvania] Legislature sending Gov. Tom Wolf a bill that finally allows beer distributors to sell six-packs. It's now that much easier for the rest of us to drink away our sorrows over the Legislature's abject failure (again) to clean up their own mess and pass a bill fixing Pennsylvania's financially disastrous public employee pension system."

—John L. Micek, "The sound of a pension can being kicked ... again ... rings hollow," The Patriot-News, October 27, 2016.

Training Session Spotlight

Attending CADCA's 27th Annual National Leadership Forum and SAMHSA's 13th Prevention Day gives you a front-row seat to the top prevention experts in the field today. Attendees not only learn new and innovative strategies from our trainers, but can also network and make connections with those in the room seeking to address similar topics and challenges. Some of our featured training sessions include:

- Get It Right Or Get Left: Combating The Opioid Crisis With The Right People At The Right Table! How do successful coalitions do it? This session will highlight three high performing coalitions that are successfully addressing the opioid epidemic in three different areas of the community: Medical, Faith and Elected officials. Attendees will be able to take away practical ways coalitions are engaging different sectors of the community in addressing opioids.

- Liquor Store Stories: Liquor Store Stories is a visual, oral and written critique of neighborhood pathways to underage drinking via establishments that sell alcohol. Students are invited to share how the presence of liquor stores affects them as they move through the city for school, work and play. Through storytelling, the youth-perspective on structures in the built environment of their communities becomes a powerful narrative. Youth are encouraged to share how they might interface with liquor stores through purchase of innocuous youth-centered products such as candy, chips and sodas, or through routine visits with older family members. Some may share that they are not patrons, but find themselves bombarded with enticing signage, or high numbers of establishments within a small radius.
- Synthetic Drugs (New Psychoactive Substances) — Solutions for Local Control in Any Size City/County: Synthetic drugs present significant and formidable challenges for law enforcement, public health officials, legislators and communities. When state and federal entities ban chemical formulas, the process is time consuming. Clandestine chemists quickly introduce new chemical formulas, staying steps ahead of legislative efforts. Legislation at the local level can be an effective way to implement policy change and is an excellent way to reduce synthetic drug impacts in communities. Local legislation can augment state and federal legislation, be implemented in a more time efficient manner and most importantly, can include a wide array of synthetic drug chemical formulas and chemical classes.

What History Tells Us About Obama's Antiquities Act Legacy

As the end of the Obama administration approaches there is renewed attention on President Barack Obama's use of the Antiquities Act of 1906. While almost every U.S. president has used his authority under this act to create new national monuments, its use has fueled tensions between the federal government and states over land control, say John Freemuth and Mackenzie Case of Boise State University.

Transportation Policy In The Trump Era: Part 2

The challenge of revitalizing and updating the nation's transportation and infrastructure will be a focus for the 115th Congress and the Trump administration. In the second of a three-part series, attorneys with Squire Patton Boggs consider the outlook for surface transportation initiatives, including the president-elect's infrastructure plans, policies on autonomous vehicles, TIGER grants and safety oversight.

Big Tax Grab Risks Nipping Cannabis Industry In The Bud

California's Proposition 64 recently legalized recreational marijuana in the state, and for many policymakers, one of its major attractions was its promise as a new revenue source for perpetually underfunded operations. But heavy-handed new taxes — which some local jurisdictions are already countenancing — could throttle the promising new cannabis industry, says Michael Chernis of the Chernis Law Group.

Avoiding Law Firm BYOD Risks: Tips For Securing Devices

Many believe that the solutions to the security problems created by using smartphones for work are primarily technological, but a much larger piece of the puzzle involves the human factor. To achieve reasonable security around mobile devices, law firms must go back to basics — clear policies, effective training and thoughtful oversight, says Everett Monroe of Hanson Bridgett LLP.

Reconciliation Offers Path To Tax Reform, Trump Adviser Says

Republicans will "absolutely" pursue tax reform under the budget reconciliation process, the White House National Economic Council director said Friday, referring to the procedure that allows Senate passage of bills related to the budget on a simple majority vote, but is limited to a 10-year time frame.

Fla. House OKs Bill Gutting Gov.'s Tax Incentive Programs

The Florida House of Representatives voted Friday to eliminate the tax incentive programs meant to lure businesses to the state and to increase oversight of the state's tourism marketing corporation, setting up a showdown with the governor, who called it "job-killing legislation."

Philly Urges Appeals Court To Affirm Soda Tax's Legality

The city of Philadelphia urged a Pennsylvania appeals court Friday to affirm a decision finding that the city's controversial new levy on sugar-sweetened beverages did not usurp the state's taxing authority, saying opponents were making political arguments that didn't implicate the tax's legality.

Vape Dealers Say Pa. E-Cig Tax Overbroad, Discriminatory

Pennsylvania sellers of nicotine vaping supplies that say the state's Department of Revenue is enforcing an illegal, overbroad application of a 40 percent tax to items not inherently vape-related had their case removed to federal court Thursday.

IMMIGRATION

Trump's Latest Travel Ban Faces First Legal Setback In Wis.

A Wisconsin federal judge dealt an early legal blow to President Donald Trump's revised travel ban Friday by blocking enforcement of the controversial executive order to prevent a processing holdup with asylum petitions for the family of a Syrian refugee in the United States.

Judge Refuses To Move Ahead In Wash. Travel Ban Case

A Washington federal judge refused to move ahead in a case over President Donald Trump's latest travel ban on Friday, pointing out that there wasn't actually a pending motion before the court, but rather just a notice of the new executive order and responses.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

How GOP Health Care Bill Would Affect Coverage Reporting

The House Republicans' "American Health Care Act" bill would repeal many provisions of the Affordable Care Act but retain and expand the information reporting rules. Health insurance issuers hoping for a full repeal of the ACA's reporting provisions will be disappointed, as the ACA's reporting regime would largely survive, at least temporarily, say Michael Chittenden and Yongo Ding of Miller and Chevalier Chartered.

Early Days Of New Administration Show Influence Of TROs

President Donald Trump's recent executive order banning travel to the U.S. by certain people from several Muslim-majority countries, and the related preliminary injunctive orders, are directly related to concepts of immigration law. However, the temporary restraining order mechanism available under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(b) is relevant to many practitioners, say attorneys at Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP.

Modernizing New York's Fraudulent Conveyance Laws

A bill recently introduced in the New York State Assembly would repeal the state's version of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and replace it with the Uniform Voidable Transaction Act. Adoption of the UVTA would be an important step in ensuring that New York law remains the gold standard in commercial contracts, says Patrick Fitzmaurice of Troutman Sanders LLP.

New Calif. Law Will Change Youth Sports Concussion Cases

California's recently enacted youth sports concussion law significantly expands the scope of the pre-existing "return to play" law, which only applied in the scholastic setting — as is the case in most other jurisdictions throughout the country. Expect to see similar expansions in other states, say Anne Marie Ellis and Paul Alarcon of Buchalter.

In Congress: ACA, Veterans Affairs, Seema Verma

Much of the attention on Capitol Hill this week will remain focused on the House Republican proposal to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act. The plan so far has been met with mixed reviews, with a number of Republican members in both chambers expressing opposition to the legislation in its current form, say Richard Hertling and Kaitlyn McClure of Covington & Burling LLP.

Shining A Light On GOP Plan For Health Care Reform

Since the election of President Trump and Republican majorities in the House and the Senate, there has been a strong push to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act. However, there has been little detail as to what "repeal" or "replace" actually mean. Recent developments provide some clarity, say members of Debevoise & Plimpton LLP.

The Need To Preserve And Expand Tribal VAWA Jurisdiction

Given the new administration's penchant for rolling back progressive civil rights and social justice victories achieved under the Obama administration, the fight to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act looms large. VAWA provides crucial protection for Native American women, who are victims of violent crime more than any other demographic, primarily at the hands of non-Natives, says Becky Howlett of Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton LLP.

NY Employers Can't Avoid Overtime And Minimum Wage Regs

When a district court judge in Texas enjoined the U.S. Department of Labor's federal overtime rule last year many employers breathed a sigh of relief. However, there are many states, like New York, that have expressed a real intent to fill the void and make sure that labor protections continue, say Joshua Zuckerberg and LaKeisha Caton of Pryor Cashman LLP.

FCC Considers Eligibility Challenge Rules For Mobility Fund

The Federal Communications Commission on Monday asked for comments on the parameters of a process that would let municipalities and service providers challenge the eligibility determinations of those qualifying for subsidies during the second phase of the Connect America Fund's Mobility Fund.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

New Class Action Bill's Impact On Employment Cases

Last week, the U.S. House of Representatives passed the so-called "Fairness in Class Action Litigation Act" with the purpose of assuring "fair and prompt recoveries for class members" and diminishing "abuses in class litigation." In reality, the bill would make it harder for employees to join together to demand lawful treatment and reimbursement of unpaid wages, say William Jhaveri-Weeks and Raymond Wendell of Goldstein Borgen Dardarian & Ho.

Evaluating SEC Plan For New Municipal Issuer Disclosures

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission recently proposed amending Rule 15c2-12 to add to the list of event notices to be included in continuing disclosure undertakings. Municipal issuers, conduit borrowers, underwriters and other market participants should consider the potential unintended consequences, say attorneys with Nixon Peabody LLP.

What ACA Repeal Means For The Future Of Medicaid

Republican party leaders have long said they believe Medicaid is fiscally unsustainable and a spending cap is necessary to fix its finances. The American Health Care Act, introduced by Republican House leadership last week, finally puts those ambitions into official legislative language, says Miranda Franco of Holland & Knight LLP.

NJ Pushes Bill To Bar Port Authority From Aiding Travel Ban

New Jersey state legislators moved ahead Monday with a bill that would bar the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey from using any of its resources to implement President Donald J. Trump's executive order that called for a travel ban from seven predominantly Muslim countries.

DOT Overstepped With Rail Safety Order, DC Circ. Told

The U.S. Department of Transportation overstepped its authority when it issued an August 2016 order imposing new safety oversight and enforcement obligations on state entities that oversee intercity passenger rail service without proper public notice and comment, a pair of agencies told the D.C. Circuit.

DC Circ. Asked To Review Deal To Close Santa Monica Airport

General aviation groups asked the D.C. Circuit on Monday to review a settlement between the Federal Aviation Administration and Santa Monica, California, in their yearslong land title dispute over control of the Santa Monica Airport, saying the deal wrongfully allows the city to close the airport by 2029.

REAL ESTATE

San Francisco Urges 9th Circ. To Revive Rental Law Dispute

An attorney for San Francisco told the Ninth Circuit Thursday that a lower court was wrong to invalidate a since-revised housing law that forced landlords to pay massive sums to tenants before taking their property off the market, telling a judge the ruling has hurt the city's ability to legislate future rent control measures.

EMPLOYMENT

Review Of NLRB Precedents In Order, House Panel Hears

Management and union lawyers clashed over the National Labor Relations Board at a U.S. House hearing Tuesday, with a Hunton & Williams LLP labor attorney saying the board needs to reconsider its Obama-era expansion of the joint employment standard and sped-up union elections and a labor lawyer testifying that criticism of recent agency actions is part of an effort to delegitimize unions.

Trump Blasts Media Co.'s Bid To Unseal 1998 Labor Deal

The Trump Organization Inc. and President Donald Trump slammed a bid by Time Inc. and The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press to unseal settlement documents that resolved Trump's 1998 dispute with a labor union, telling the Second Circuit that neither the First Amendment nor the common law right of access applies here.

Doctors, Int'l Science Org Back OSHA In Silica Rule Fight

An international scientific organization and an organization of occupation and environmental medical physicians have come out in support of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's new rules on worker exposure to silica dust in several industries, telling the D.C. Circuit the regulations would reduce health impairments.

Ill. Gov. Sues To Block Employee Pay Cutoff Motion

The night before Gov. Bruce Rauner's annual budget address, Rauner late Tuesday filed an opposition to Illinois Attorney General Lisa

Madigan's motion to halt state worker pay amid Illinois' unprecedented budget crisis, urging a state judge to reject Madigan's "invitation to create an artificial emergency."

LGBT Groups Urge Trump To Keep Trans Student Policies

Four LGBT advocacy groups urged the Trump administration on Monday to preserve an Obama administration directive that public school students be allowed to use the restroom that matches their gender identity, saying it helps protect some of the nation's most vulnerable students.

Reps Urge FCC To Undo Lifeline Eligibility Reversal

Several dozen House representatives urged Federal Communications Commission Chairman Ajit Pai on Monday to reconsider his decision to strip nine companies of eligibility to provide broadband service under the Lifeline program for low-income users, saying the move will hurt poor children and widen the digital divide.

Trade Group Asks FCC For More Broadband Build-Out Funds

The United States Telecom Association asked the Federal Communications Commission on Monday to increase funding levels for a broadband build-out support mechanism, saying that the priority of using it to deploy broadband in rural America means more funding is needed.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Trump, Lockheed And The Art Of The Government Deal

President Donald Trump has made his federal procurement debut, announcing two weeks ago that Lockheed Martin agreed to cut $600 million from its next production lot of F-35 Joint Strike Fighter planes. His tweets and negotiations raise a slew of questions on how these tactics fit into the densely regulated field of government contracts, say attorneys with Pepper Hamilton LLP.

Overcoming Obstacles To Financial Reform And Deregulation

Creating a list of industry-endorsed reforms is perhaps the easiest task to complete when attempting to ease financial regulatory burdens. However, sorting through and identifying realistic, achievable regulatory reforms at the agency level will prove much more difficult and vexing because of the complexity of current agency interconnectivity, says Joseph Lynyak III of Dorsey & Whitney LLP.

Gorsuch May Further Tip Balance Against Deference To EPA

From an environmental law perspective, Judge Neil Gorsuch has shown a willingness to reassess Chevron deference to an agency's interpretation of the statutes it implements. If confirmed to the U.S. Supreme Court, he could fan further interest in revisiting Chevron deference at a time when the court is actively considering what deference is due an agency when it interprets its own regulations, say attorneys with Bracewell LLP.

FERC Could See Substantial Changes Under President Trump

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission oversees electric utilities and gas pipelines that account for about 4 percent of the U.S. gross national product. So the impact of FERC policy shifts can be significant. Under the Trump administration, FERC could revisit its stances on market manipulation, net metering and other key issues, say John Estes III and Timothy Mastrogiamomo of Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP.

A New Element In Awarding Calif. Public Works Contracts

Legislation recently proposed in California would require the disclosure of greenhouse gas emissions generated by the manufacture of certain "eligible materials" for public works projects. If passed, it could have the biggest effect on companies that manufacture construction materials, especially cement, flat glass, manufactured wool, steel and asphalt, say attorneys with Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP.

How A General Counsel Should Think About AI

Though the Trump administration has yet to make an official statement regarding artificial intelligence, support for AI is consistent with its expressed desire to promote American business. As such, general counsel will inevitably have to navigate what big data and AI mean for compliance with current and future laws and regulations, say Bruce Heiman and Elana Reman of K&L Gates LLP.

A Rule Against Pretext, Taken Out Of Context

An attorney who negotiates a serial killer's surrender is suspended from legal practice. A highly successful investigative unit that protects children from internet predators is shut down. Nomination of Acosta for Secretary of Labor a likely improvement

Vetting needed, but new nominee appears friendlier to workers

After the failed nomination of Andrew Puzder for Secretary of Labor, the Trump administration put forward Alexander Acosta, dean of the Florida International University College of Law and former assistant attorney general for the Civil Rights Division under President George W. Bush. Policy Matters Ohio sees this move as a step in the right direction for working people.

"Rigorous vetting is still needed but unlike Puzder, Acosta does not appear to be a nominee bent on dismantling the institution he is set to lead," said Hannah Halbert, researcher with Policy Matters Ohio. "The Department of Labor must be dedicated to welfare and safety of wage-earners. Not their bosses."

Ohioans value worker rights. The state overwhelmingly voted down laws that sought to restrict collective bargaining and voted in support of a state constitutional amendment that increased and indexed the minimum wage. As hearings begin, working people of Ohio will want to know where Acosta stands on these issues. Policy Matters will look for evidence that Acosta will work for safe and healthy workplaces, more and better jobs, and a better life for working people in Ohio and the United States.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

In Retrospect

Relearning The Lessons Of Korematsu's Case

Fred Korematsu's U.S. Supreme Court case challenging President Franklin Roosevelt's executive order that led to the incarceration of approximately 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry may sound like ancient history. However, Feb. 19 marks the 75th anniversary of the order's signing, and that it's celebrating its diamond anniversary now is breathtaking timing, says Randy Maniloff of White and Williams LLP.

CPSC Civil Penalties: A Statistical Analysis

In 2015, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman Elliot Kaye announced that he had directed CPSC staff to seek "double-digit" penalties from companies found to be in violation of the Consumer Product Safety Act. Kaye appears to have accomplished his stated goal — a statistical analysis of agency fines shows that companies are being punished more severely than before, says Jonathan Judge of Schiff Hardin LLP.

How A General Counsel Should Think About AI: Part 2

General counsels face the challenging task of understanding how companies can navigate the rules surrounding uses of artificial intelligence. To get smart on AI, general counsels must ask the right questions about areas such as human resources, intellectual property, liability and insurance, say Bruce Heiman and Elana Reman of K&L Gates LLP.

In the White House, and across states, education in the spotlight... this week in CER Newswire.

= A

A weekly report on education news and commentary you won't find anywhere else — spiced with a dash of irreverence — from the nation's leading voice in school reform.

CER NEWSWIRE: APRIL 11, 2017

Education is hot today in Washington. 17 CEOs are at the White House, scheduled to talk about issues ranging from education & infrastructure (note: we think they go together). The Atlantic's 3rd annual ideas summit is up and running and we're happy to see the presence of Derrell Bradford to balance that of Randi Weingarten. Education choice is, like the pollen count, spreading into the ether, and more...

A TALKING POINT FOR THE WHITE HOUSE & THE CEOS. Imagine combining needed improvements in rural infrastructure in those red states that so handily won the race for Trump with expanded and improved educational options, and private sector development of teacher villages to attract talent. That should be what is on the national agenda today. "Until educational, social and economic policies are implemented with rural communities in mind, rural citizens should continue to work to break down barriers for more socially just rural schools and communities in the same way that urban citizens have.” That’s the argument from a Penn State Professor for one piece of the puzzle improving rural communities - “The Unique case for rural charter schools,” . Together with providing much needed flexibility for school districts to innovate and incentives for public private partnerships, a commitment to rural America could make today’s meeting truly pathbreaking.

MEANWHILE OVER AT THE NEWSEUM... The Atlantic is hosting its education summit, conducting interviews of newsmakers in education as a look into what’s next for edreform. AFT head Randi Weingarten was on the same stage (sadly, not together) with long time ed reformer Derrell Bradford. Watch here.

OH, WHAT? Asked for comment following a discussion on charters, Weingarten lamented, “Oh god...,” and went on to claim the schools were the AFT’s idea. Not so! The real origin?

#BLACKDEGREESMATTER. If you want to know what parents and students really think about school choice, check out this piece from the Philadelphia Citizen.

CHOICE SPREADS. It’s been imbedded deeper and deeper in the environment, and in a society that is all about advancement, after 26 years you’d expect to reach a tipping point. By now it should be clear: education must evolve at the pace of its nation.

The latest spread is in pioneering Arizona, where a universally available new choice program will allow 5,500 additional students this year and 30,000 by 2022 to sign up for Empowerment Scholarship Accounts, giving them access to programs that biggest meet their children's needs.

MEET WOMEN IN GOVERNMENT'S 2017 NATIONAL BOARD VICE CHAIR

Representative Stacey Guerin (R-Maine) has been involved with Women In Government for many years. She began her involvement with the organization in 2012 as a State Director and joined the board of directors in 2013. First elected in 2010, Representative Guerin is serving in her 4th term in the Maine State Legislature. Representative Guerin serves as the ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee.

Before her time in public office, Representative Guerin was running her small business with her husband as well as being involved in various groups in Maine, including being a member of the Maine School Nutrition Association, the Maine Restaurant Association, and the Greater Bangor Area Chamber of Commerce, among others.

Meet WIG's New Executive Director Lucy Gettman

On April 3, 2017, WIG welcomed new executive director Lucy Gettman. Coming from the National School Boards Association, Lucy brings her expertise working with fifty state school board associations and skills as Chief Advocacy Officer to WIG. Her deep legislative and organizational leadership experience is driven by past positions with Reading Recovery Council of North America, Ohio House of Representatives, Ohio Attorney General's Office and the Inter-University Council of Ohio. She has been intimately involved with Women In Government Relations and teaches courses on women and political leadership at American University where she received the Alice Paul Faculty Award in 2014. "I'm excited to be on board as WIG tackles the policy and political challenges facing women legislators around the country," Gettman says, "WIG is poised to do to great things for our members now and in the future." Help us welcome Lucy to WIG!

Do You Enjoy a Game of Fantasy Sports? States Struggling to Determine Control

Millions of Americans enjoy playing fantasy sports with family and friends for fun and bragging rights in their casual office pools and rotisserie-style leagues. But this activity is not the same as the exploding business of online daily fantasy sports gambling operated by a relatively new corporate industry. Many states across the nation are struggling with the question of whether and how to allow online daily fantasy sports gambling, including how it could factor into state gambling laws, amid a legislative push to treat daily fantasy gambling as a game of skill.

THE HEARTLAND INSTITUTE

Tax Day, Income Taxes, and Constitutional Amendments

On April 18, Americans suffered through another Tax Day, a time when many taxpayers angrily point to the federal government's passage of the 16th Amendment as the root cause of their dismay. While the federal government deserves plenty of blame come tax season, taxpayers shouldn't forget state legislatures played a significant role in the ratification of the income tax amendment.

In 1890, the Tariff Act, otherwise known as the McKinley Tariff, was passed, imposing steep tariffs that eventually resulted in the enactment of the Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act in 1894. Wilson-Gorman reduced tariff rates and introduced a 2 percent income tax. In 1895, the Supreme Court declared the Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act income tax unconstitutional in Pollock v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co.

In 1909, Congress passed a resolution approving an amendment to the U.S. Constitution for the establishment of a federal income tax. Prior to becoming law, amendments must be ratified by three-fourths of the states. It would take four years for the necessary threshold to be met, when in February 1913, Delaware became the 36th state to approve the resolution, thereby enabling ratification. A total of six states did not participate in ratification.

The history of the income tax and its ratification is of great significance, because many states are currently proposing legislation aiming to amend the U.S. Constitution for the inclusion of a federal balanced budget amendment.

Though all the amendments passed in the nation's history thus far have been initiated by Congress, the Constitution allows for states to approve amendments under Article V of the Constitution, provided that two-thirds, or 34 states, pass applications to call a convention to propose amendments to the Constitution.

Currently, an Article V movement calling for a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution is gaining traction. At the end of 2016, a total of 28 states had passed resolutions to apply for an Article V convention for the purpose of proposing a balanced budget amendment.

In 2017, Arizona, Idaho, Kentucky, Montana, South Carolina, Wisconsin, and Wyoming have introduced resolutions applying for an Article V convention for the purpose of a balanced budget amendment. Arizona and Wyoming successfully passed their resolutions. Maryland rescinded all its previously approved Article V applications.

In addition to the states have passed or are considering approving an application for balanced budget amendment, Arizona passed a resolution that provides for a planning convention to take place on September 12, 2017.

The call for a balanced budget amendment stems from the increasing level of federal debt and the great deal of power seized from the states by the federal government in recent years. In a recent Research & Commentary, Government Relations Coordinator Lindsey Stroud reported, "As of February 3, the United States held over $19 trillion in total public debt, a figure that is expected to grow over the next decade." Stroud also found the "federal government has failed to address the mounting debt crisis, and the 115th Congress approved in January a nearly $10 trillion increase of publicly held debt."

It is important for state lawmakers to understand the significant role states played in the establishment of the federal income tax and the responsibility they have to support policies that will hold the federal government accountable. State legislators should use the opportunity presented by the Article V movement as a vehicle to reestablish states' rights and to ensure the federal government acts in a more fiscally responsible manner in the future.

Research & Commentary: Nebraska Tax Reform

= In this Research & Commentary, Senior Policy Analyst Matthew Glans examines a proposal to reform Nebraska's individual and corporate tax rates. Glans says, "At first glance, Nebraska's tax system appears competitive. According to the Tax Foundation, state residents pay $3,853 per capita in state and local taxes, ranking the state 17th highest in the nation and comparable to neighboring Colorado and Kansas."
